ABOUT THESE PLANS

These plans provided are designed to give a rough outline of how a tiny house is constructed. They are very basic in their nature and aren't designed to be a working set of plans.

The main reason that I don't provide a full set of plans is because every house is unique to the builder and this guide helps you just enough to get a sense so you can design your own plans. Even if I had designed your perfect home, it would be wrong for thousands of others who read this guide. So I designed this to be more of a template than anything.

These designs allow you to see how different portions come together, get a feel for the whole house and inform you in making your own plans. I've provided the elevations (different views) to give you a feel for how the house is laid out.

The sketch-up file helps you understand how the different layers of the systems go together. In order to open the file you will need to download a free copy of Sketch-up. Please direct any questions about that program to Sketch-up. Within the sketch-up file you will find a host of different layers that you can toggle on and off. To do this, look under the layers section (Window > Default Tray > Layers).

I've design this house with two roof options, gable and shed. In order to design the model, above the wall sections, you'll need to toggle on Roof Framing, Roof Sheathing, and Roofing for the appropriate style.

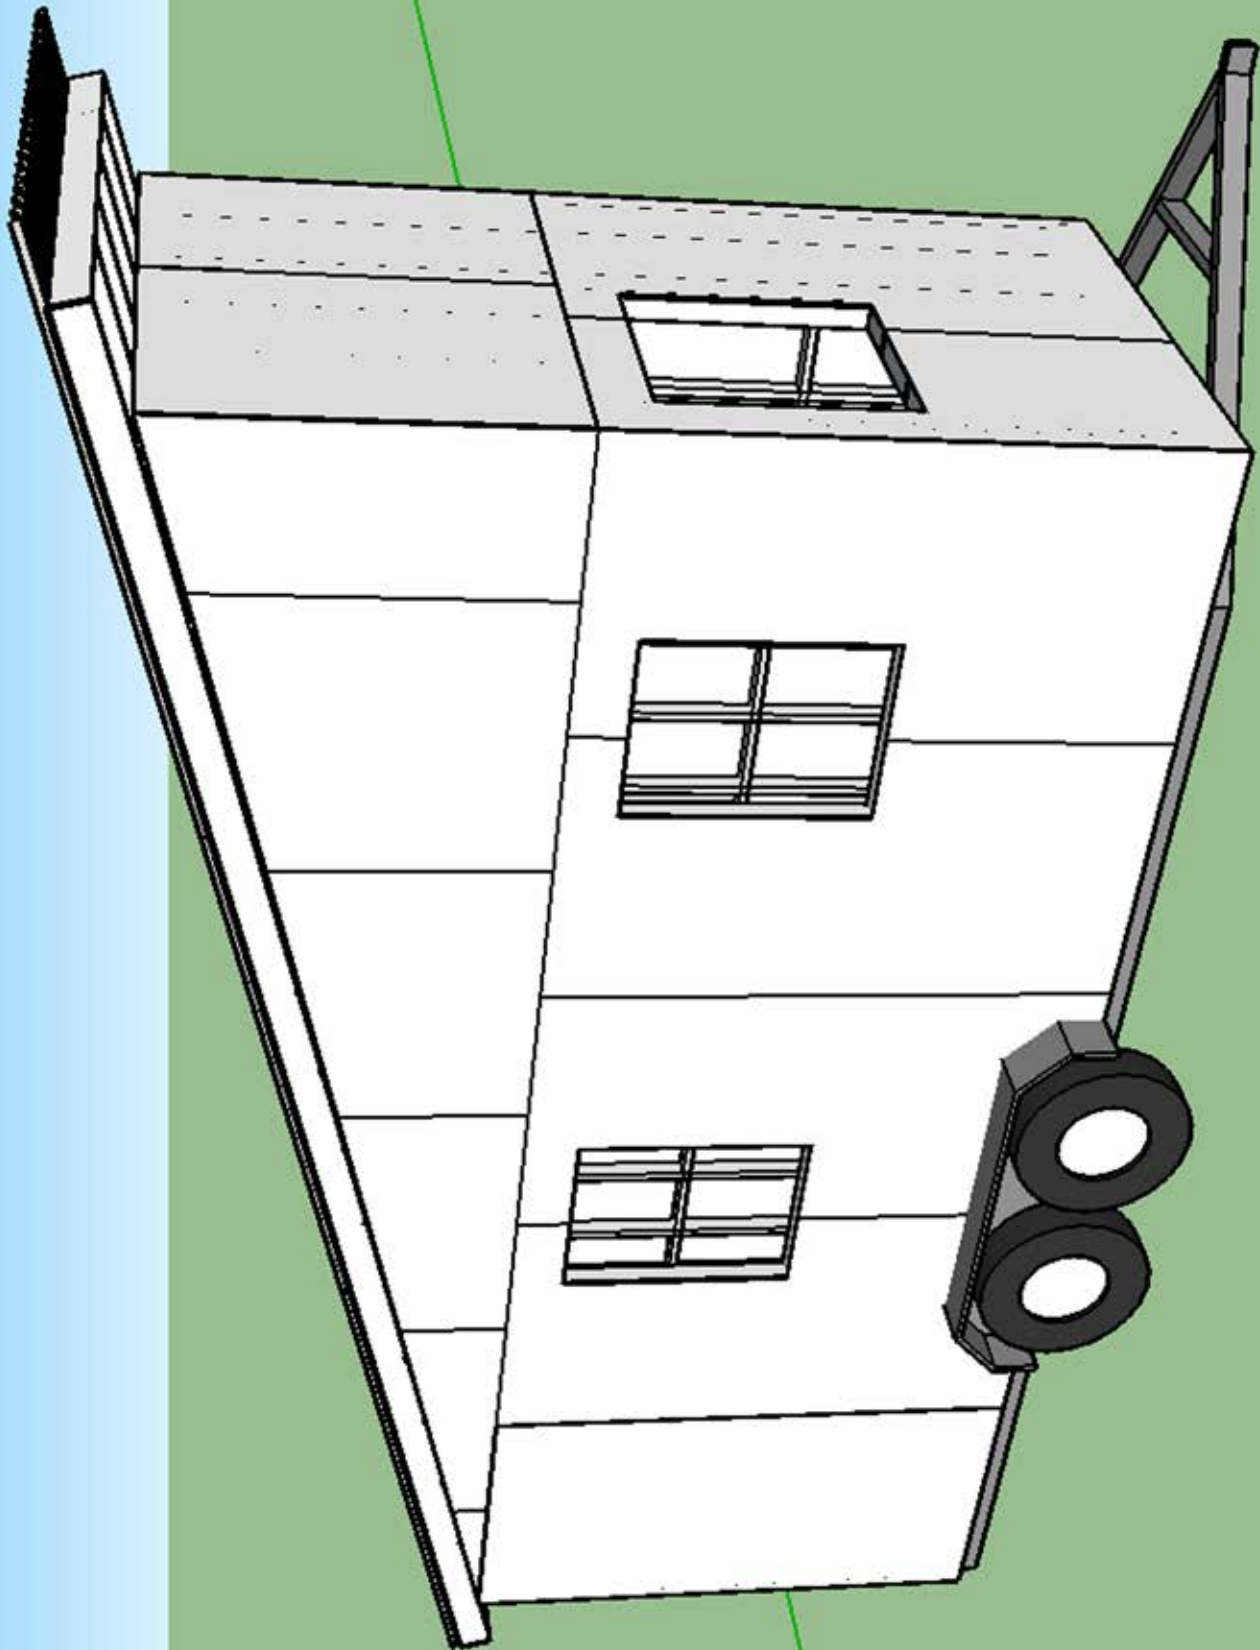

If you aren't familiar with sketch-up, I highly recommend that you learn how to use it. There are thousands of free tutorials on YouTube and if you take some time to Google certain aspects of it, you'll find great articles. Even if you're going to have someone else build it for you, sketch-up is a great tool to help you visualize the space.

Happy Building!
